Taurus new moon

The Fixed Earth sign Taurus provides a sense of practical grounded surefootedness. It has the capacity to easily manage material matters and money. Taurus has a very hands-on approach to all manner of tools and practical processes.

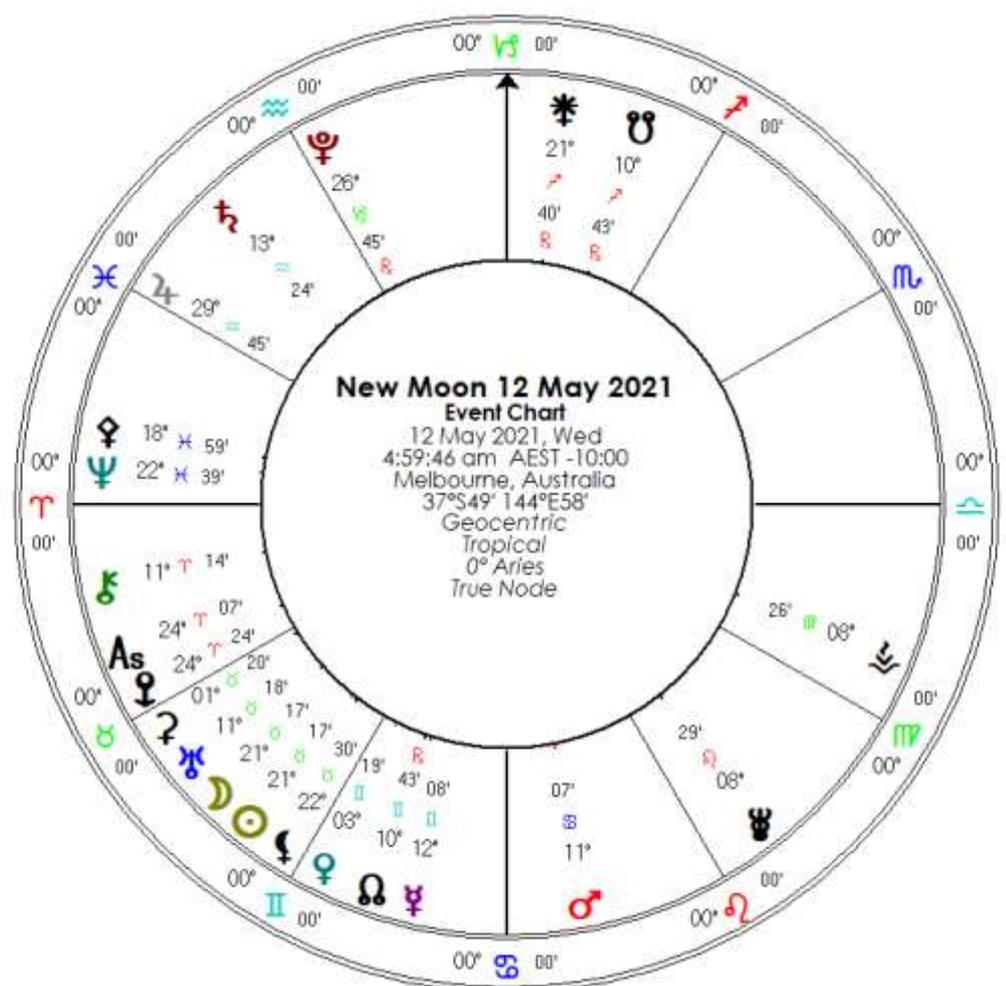

Industrious, loyal and focused, Taurus also wants to ensure that there is a polished finish to all its works. In keeping with Venus its ruling planet, beauty is just as important as functionality.

At this Taurus New Moon, maverick Uranus in Taurus is in a tight sextile to Mars in Cancer. This is a call to adventure offering the possibility to new endeavours and different approaches. Though Taurus is sometimes uncomfortable with change, Uranus continues to make its way through this fixed earth sign, so Taurean types are having to adapt to the unexpected. Mars squares Chiron, so in tackling anything new, be mindful of the risk involved and watch out for mishaps and potential accidents.

Venus in Gemini offers wider scope for social engagement and Jupiter will shift into Pisces on the 14th for a couple of months before tracking back into Aquarius. This short ingress into the Pisces realm provides some a deeper feelings of empathy and sensitivity over coming weeks.

sagittarius Full Moon

This is a powerful Supermoon, the largest one for this year, plus it's a total lunar eclipse! This eclipse will be visible in Australia, weather permitting.

our focus shift away from our own needs to place more emphasis on our relationships. Retrograde Mercury always has the potential to throw us a curve ball in our communications, especially with email and other technology based communication, so think things through carefully.

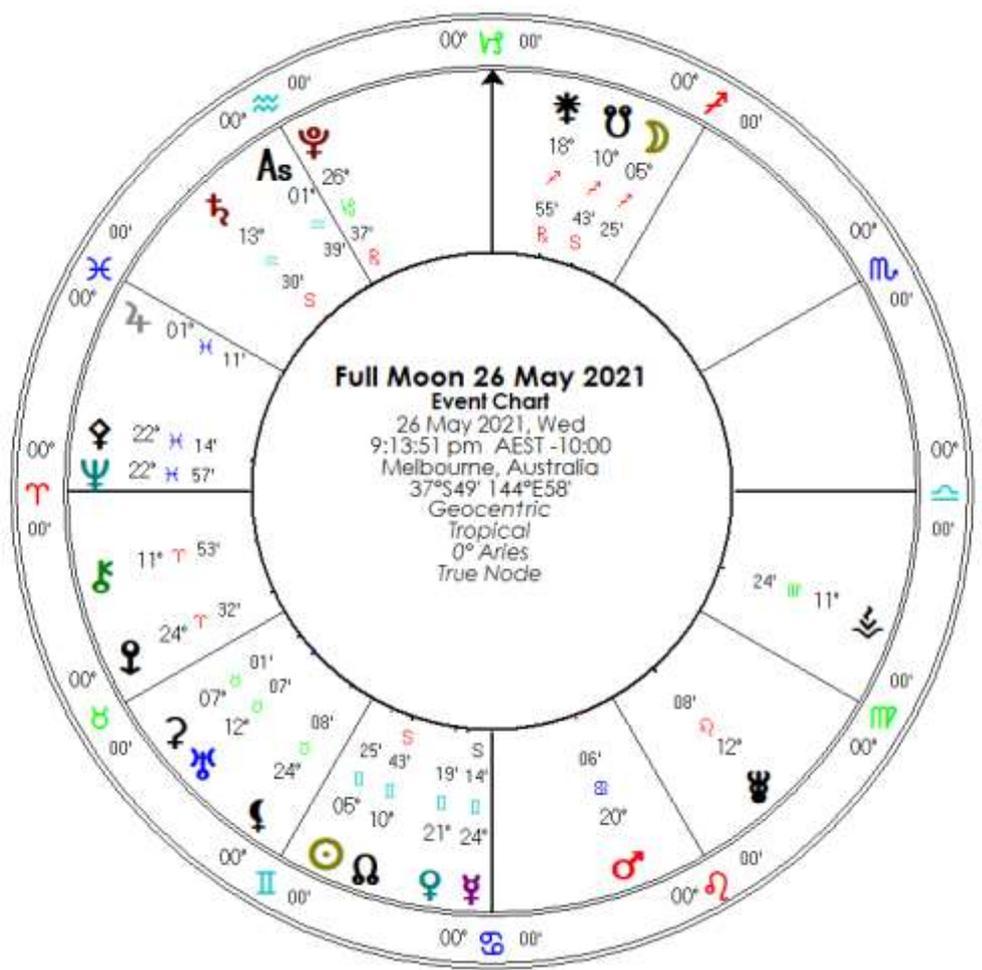

This is the perfect ambience for compiling and editing. Mercury and Venus square Neptune, so triple check everything as it will be easy to overlook the obvious.

As with all Supermoons this has the potential to raise the emotional temperature. Positive and negative emotions can be exaggerated now, so do your best to keep a level head.

Jupiter shifted into Pisces on the 14th where it will reside for a couple of months before returning to Aquarius in July. For the next couple of months we are likely to see more empathy and understanding especially around those from foreign cultures and those with differing beliefs.

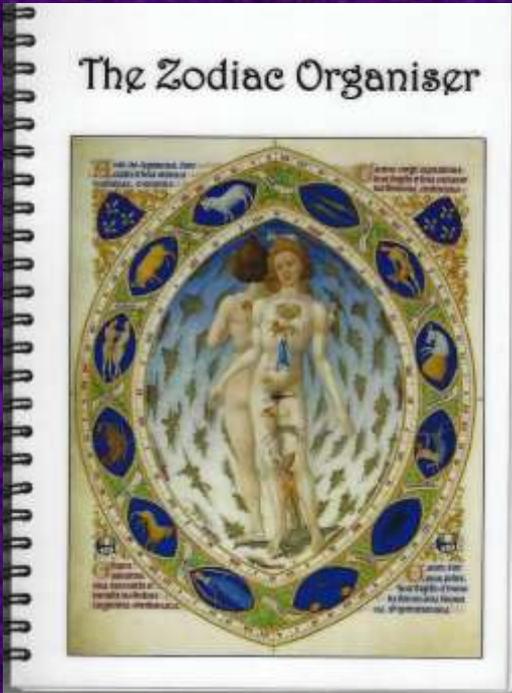

Saturn is stationary now too, so it's important to spend time reviewing plans and ambitions.

Mercury is at a standstill and sits close to Venus in Gemini, providing an opportunity to rethink our direction forward. This should see

Many airlines are struggling to survive amid the COVID crisis. Qantas, one of the world's oldest and safest airlines recently posted a huge loss, but plan to return to international flights at the end of October, Qantas CEO Alan Joyce has announced. However this could be further delayed, depending on how the world emerges from COVID.

I have used 12 noon as the time for this chart.

When COVID hit, the Qantas Mars, Vesta and the Moon (using a 12 noon chart) were all being transited by Pluto and Saturn. The Qantas chart is also experiencing its second Chiron return at the moment. Transiting Uranus is now aligning with the Nodal Axis so the future for Qantas is still very uncertain.

Here in Australia we are luckier than many countries in how we have dealt with COVID-19. Across the world there are around 120 countries with more cases of the virus than we have had here. Despite a few outbreaks, our isolation and strict quarantine of travellers, and tight lockdown measures have kept the virus largely under control.

Transiting Saturn will soon oppose Neptune in the Qantas chart, so the depressed state of international travel and the impact on Qantas will continue for a while yet. Transiting Uranus will oppose the Sun and Mercury in a few years as well, so a further shake up is on the cards too.

Interestingly, for an airline, there are no planets in the air element in this chart. This is perhaps a good thing in terms of creating a feeling of stability and safety. Qantas is the world's safest airline and one of the oldest. This inherent stability should help to keep Qantas in the air.
