NOVEMBER 2023

The Voice to Parliament was defeated, even though there were transits to Australia's chart that suggested an openness to change.

It seems there is much division in the world today. Looking at the bigger global picture, there is a conjunction of Eris and the Nodal Axis with Chiron close by. This aspect seems fraught with strife and suffering. Mars and Uranus are in opposition this month, which is likely to prolong the angst.

The October eclipses have seen violence erupt in the Middle East adding to the pain and suffering across the world. As Pluto moves through the last stages of Capricorn, old wounds are resurfacing. The end of a sign is often a time of transition, and Pluto elicits a process of endings and beginnings, so let's hope that love and healing will soon bring about a peaceful transition. We're swiftly approaching the conclusion to another year, let's hope that peace and love can be found soon.

SCORPIO NEW MOON

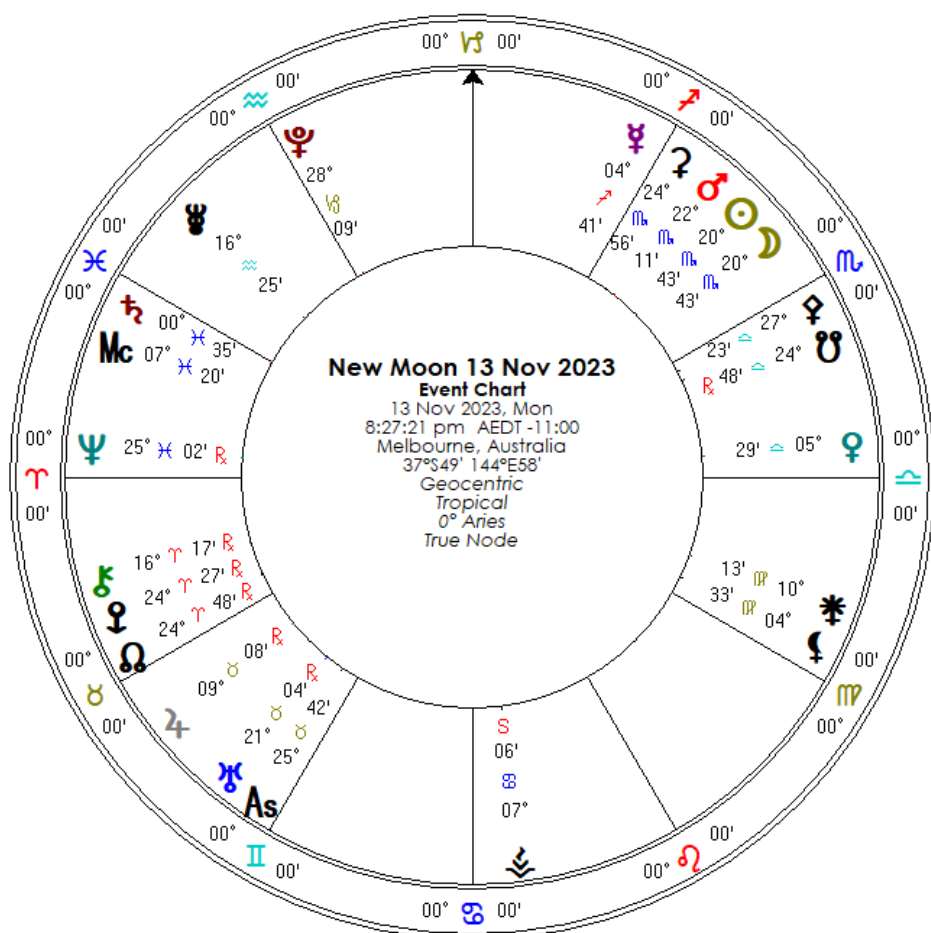

Before Pluto was discovered in 1930, Mars was between the Sun/Moon/Mars/ the original ruling planet Ceres conjunction and radical may- of Scorpio and it features prominently at this New Moon.

Mars is about to commence a new synodic cycle when it is conjunct the Sun. At the same time there is a powerful opposition Ceres conjunction and radical may- erick planet Uranus. There are also a number of awkward semi-sextiles and quincunxes involving the Nodal Axis and Chiron. All this stellar activity points to a dramatic New Moon full of tension and sudden events.

Pluto is now moving through the last degrees of Capricorn before shifting into Aquarius early next year. The end of any sign is the conclusion of a cycle and since we are talking about Pluto, this process is intense and relates to long term unfinished business.

With Mars, Uranus and Pluto making their presence felt, this New Moon is likely to prolong tension and at the same time press us to take action on issues of long standing that have not yet been addressed.

GEMINI FULL MOON

Sun, Mars and Ceres are now aligned in Sagittarius, opposing the Full Moon and forming a mutable T-square with Saturn. This is an unstable combination that could foster misunderstandings and lead to communication difficulties. Mercury squaring Neptune adds to the potential for confusion.

Mutable signs are good at multitasking and there is no shortage of variety on offer. This is a hectic period with the end of the year is swiftly approaching.

Mars is moving swiftly having just commenced a new synodic cycle. The Mars synod is the longest of any planetary synod, and it marries with the concept of the heroic journey. This is the kick off point for the next two years, a time where we are energised and feel ready to embark on a new challenge. Sagittarius boosts confidence and provides a spirit of adventure.

While there is ample energy available to tackle multiple projects and tasks, rushing and carelessness could create some havoc and missteps.

CHARTS IN THE NEWS

The Middle East

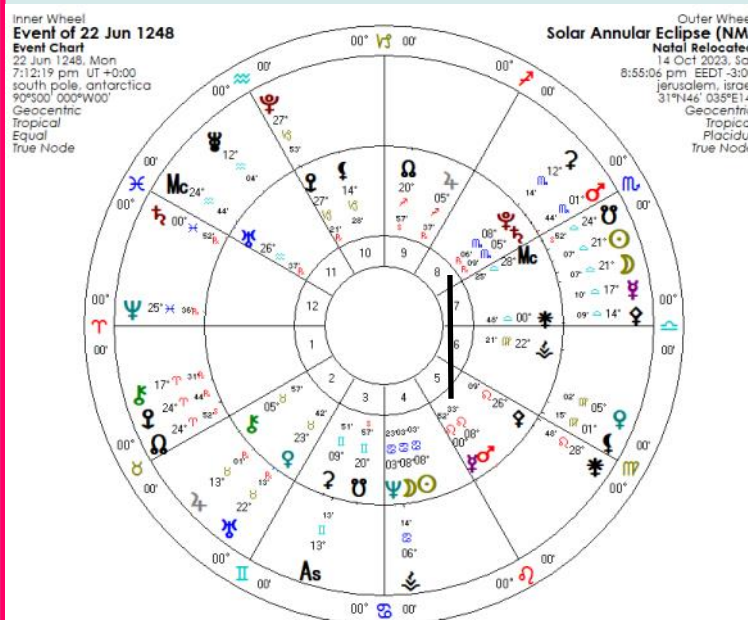

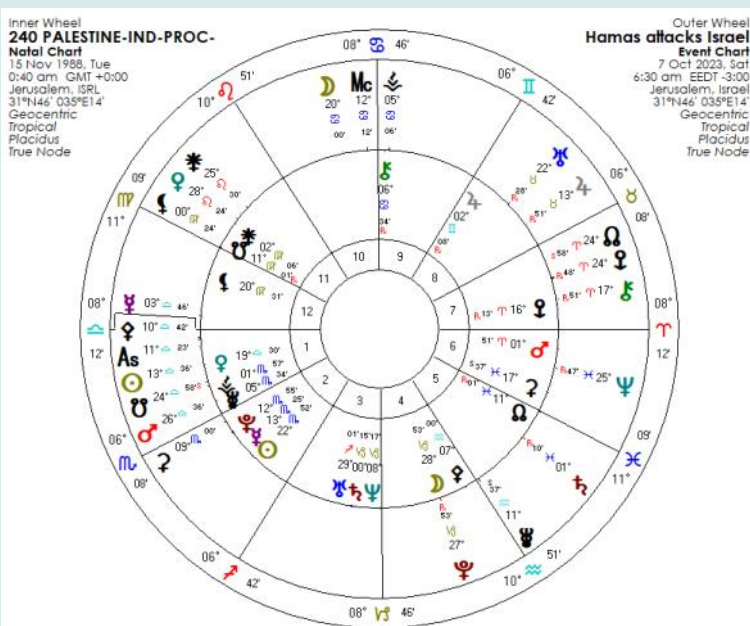

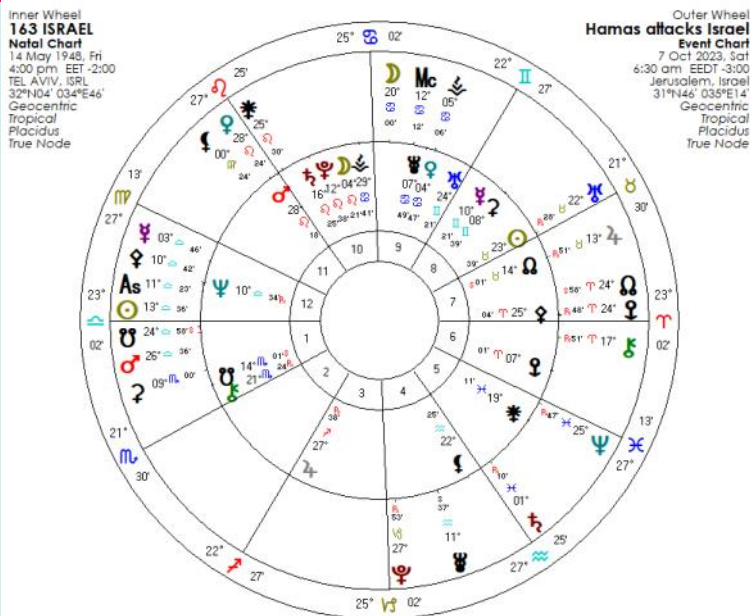

The Middle East has erupted in violence. This is shown by a range of transits and the recent solar eclipse. Transiting Pluto is aligned with Israel's 4th house, showing the deep wounds that have been reignited. In this 1948 chart, the Sun opposes Chiron, a reminder of the wounds of the past, and transiting Uranus is aligning with the Sun and Chiron. The recent solar eclipse triggered the Ascendant, while transiting Eris and the North node are crossing the Descendant.

The people of Gaza are in an horrific situation as a result of the retaliation against the Hamas attacks. For a long time the people of Palestine have been disenfranchised and now the horror of war has once again engulfed the region.

In the most recent chart for Palestine independence (1988), transiting Pluto is triggering the Moon, and transiting Uranus opposes the Sun.

There is a long and bloody history of religious conflict and angst at the heart of these divisions, harking back centuries, multiplied by years of pain and suffering. There seems to be a high degree of division across the world in the wake of the October eclipses despite the fact that Libra is meant to be a sign of peace, fairness and justice.

The recent October solar eclipse is part of a Saros cycle that began in the year 1248 which was the exact year that the 7th Crusade began in the Middle East. In the original chart for the 1248 eclipse there is a powerful Saturn-Pluto conjunction with a tight square to Mars. On the day of the recent attacks, Mars and Pluto were also in a tight square. Note that transiting Pluto was aligning with Eris, transiting Uranus was aligned with Venus.

The North Node and Eris are very tightly aligned in Mars ruled Aries at this point in time, with wounded Chiron close by. It seems that war, strife and discord are everywhere just now. The news reports are distressing. Let's all try to focus on enveloping the world in peace, love and healing. Ultimately, love and compassion are far more powerful than bullets and bombs.

THE EARTH

The ancients believed that the Earth was the centre of creation and that all the planets revolved around us. Copernicus and Kepler first awakened to the reality of the solar system and many stellar advances have followed.

Western astrology was founded in the northern hemisphere and consequently, the signs of the zodiac were created from that seasonal perspective.

The Sun is in Scorpio when life moves underground and there is the natural cycle of decay, but this is Spring in the Southern hemisphere where we experience rebirth so this symbolism fits both hemispheres. Saturn being the coldest traditional planet, rules Capricorn and Aquarius which are the coldest times of the year in the northern half of the Earth, but this is the hottest time of year down under. The Sun is in Leo at the coldest time of the year down under, but the Sun here has less power than any other time of the seasonal calendar. To take account of these seasonal anomalies, maybe we should consider planet Earth. At all times the Earth is located in the opposite sign to the Sun. So for example, in July-August, when the Sun is in Leo, the Earth is in Aquarius.

Maybe we should start placing the Earth into our astrology charts. How does the Earth itself factor into our lives? Every day we live here, we create here, we breathe the air, we use its water, we rely on the Sun's energy and the Earth itself for our survival. By taking the Earth into account we also begin to respect the Earth and honour her beauty, biodiversity and uniqueness.

Opposing signs possess the same quality which is tense but harmonious elements, which helps to reconcile their opposing nature. So whether you are in the northern or southern hemisphere, when you look at the sign the Sun is in, look at the opposing sign where the Earth is located and honour her vital role in our daily lives. Considering opposing signs might help to restore balance on Earth.
